Components

Built directly on the Brand Bible's locked tokens — Forest, Chartreuse, Charcoal, Cream, Moss; Bricolage Grotesque and Plus Jakarta Sans. No gradients anywhere below, including the one place the live product still has one.

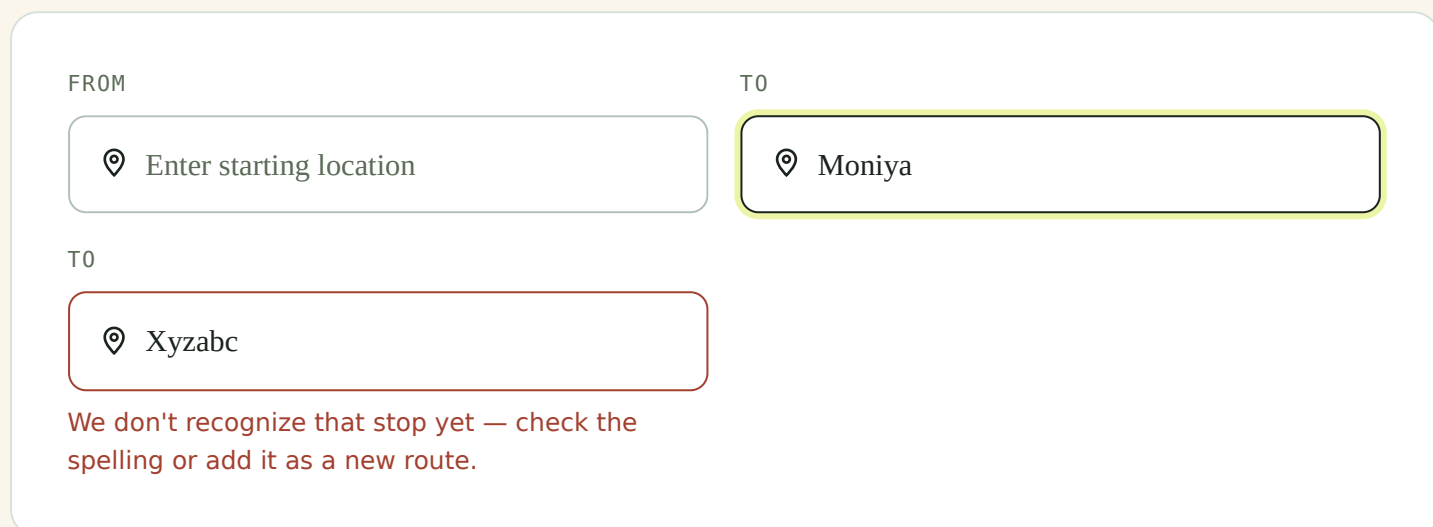

01 Buttons

One filled style, one outline style, and the two states that matter most in a route-fetching app: disabled and loading.

02 Inputs

Location fields, since that's nearly every input in the product. Default, focused, filled with an error, and a hint state.

03 Cards & Pills

The route result card and the quick-route pill — both live on the home screen today in the generic gray/white template style.

04 Navigation

Bottom nav, three tabs. Active state is a solid Forest fill, not the flat green pill currently live.

05 Empty & Loading States

Called out by name in the brief. An empty search shouldn't feel like a dead end — it should point straight at contributing.

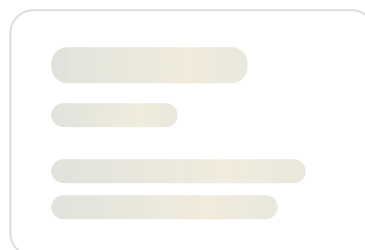

No route for that yet

Nobody's mapped this one. Be the first padi to add it — you'll earn XP for it.

06 Applied — Home Screen

The actual "Find Your Way Across The City" screen, live on routepadi.com today, rebuilt with every component above. Compare it to what's live now.

07 Profile Components

Avatar, stat row, level progress, and the achievement tiles — using the exact badge objects locked in the Brand Bible, not the stock emoji live today. Locked ones desaturate and pick up a lock mark instead of disappearing, which is also how OG Padi (Milestone 7) sits here before the launch window opens.

09 Leaderboard

The tip banner and the contributor list from the real Contribute screen. #1 gets the Master Scout crown instead of a gold emoji; everyone else is a plain ranked row — a fuller medal treatment for 2nd/3rd is a fast-follow, not required to ship this.

10 Applied — Contribute

The Contribute Route / Verify Route screen and its leaderboard, rebuilt end to end.

All three real screens are rebuilt end to end — Home, Profile, Contribute — and every achievement tile and rank icon carries the final pixel badge art, not placeholders. Milestones 1-7 are locked, including Social Media Templates, Content Strategy, and Launch Campaign — the plan that finally puts the OG Padi badge (renders here using the exact same achievement-tile treatment as every other badge) into use. Next up: Milestone 8, Marketing Assets.
